

Terminating Easements Appurtenant

Easements appurtenant may be terminated in several ways.

- The easement owner may release the easement if it is no longer needed.
- A dominant and servient land could be merged into one parcel.
- The easement owner could abandon the easement.
- The necessity of an easement by necessity could be terminated (e.g., by building a new access road for the dominant tenement).
- An easement with a deadline could expire.