

Confidentiality, Done Wrong Transcript

Taylor, listing agent: I can't believe I'm not getting any action on this listing. (Dials phone)

Hello? Mrs. Baker? This is Taylor. Look-we haven't had any showings, and I know you need to be out in 30 days. Do you want to talk about a price reduction? No? Not yet? Okay. Well, thanks. Yeah, let me know. No, I won't tell anyone that you need to be out quickly. (Hangs up)

Dang. I'll never get this puppy sold. I know! I'll just write here in the private remarks: "Seller highly motivated." That should get the idea across that we're open to offers! (Phone rings)

Other agent: Hello? Yes, the listing on Harborside. I'm looking at it right now. Great property! Is the seller firm on price?

Taylor: Actually, I think there might be some wiggle room there. Why don't you write something up, and we'll see where it gets us?

Wrong! The duty of confidentiality means you do not divulge anything the seller has asked you to keep confidential-even subtly.
