

Obedience, Done Wrong Transcript

Title screen: The Fiduciary Duty of Obedience-What Not to Do

Dave, listing agent, on phone: You'll be out of town this weekend? Back Monday morning? Oh, no showings unless I'm there? Um. Okay. You're the boss. Have a nice trip.

hangs up phone

Dave, listing agent: Dang. I had plans to go sailing this weekend.

phone rings

Dave, listing agent: Hello? Speaking ... You'd like to show my listing at 2 p.m. on Saturday? Any chance you can switch to say, Sunday after 6? No? Okay. I understand. Sure. Um ... Yes, there will be a lock box on the door. Just let yourself in. Be sure to lock up and turn off lights when you leave. Yes, thanks.

hangs up phone

Dave, listing agent: Whew! Now ... where'd I put my sailing gloves?

Screen overlay: WRONG! For breaking the fiduciary duty of obedience, Dave has left himself open to a charge of misrepresentation, a potential loss of a client, fines, and other disciplinary sanctions.