

The Informal Conference

After a complaint is filed, the respondent has 15 days to choose one of three options for addressing the complaint. One of those options is the informal conference, which may also be called at any time during the complaint process at the department's discretion.

The informal conference allows the licensee to meet with the department and come to an agreement on the outcome, such as penalties. The agreement is known as a stipulation and states the terms of the agreement between the department and the licensee.

Once a stipulation has been created, it is sent to the board for approval. The board can choose to reject the stipulation and force the licensee to take the next step, which is a contested case hearing.

If the board accepts the stipulation, the terms of the agreement go into effect. The penalties can be anything listed in Article 6 of the Michigan Occupational Code.
