

Broker Supervisory Requirements in Michigan

A broker or associate broker designated as a supervisory brokers is in charge of supervising real estate salespersons. At a minimum, this supervision includes:

- Being in direct, regular communication with the salesperson (this can be in person, via phone, email, or another medium)
- Reviewing the salesperson's activities and practices
- Reviewing the salesperson's reports
- Analyzing and providing guidance related to the salesperson's performance
- Providing written policies and procedures to the salesperson

Additionally, brokers can't contract with licensees who are affiliated with other brokers in such a way that interferes or limits that licensee's broker's authority to supervise.

Example

Joe is a salesperson associated with Gardenside Real Estate and the company's broker, Brett. Joe's friend Tony is also a broker. Tony runs HomeSearch Real Estate across town, just a few blocks from where Joe's recently moved. When Joe complains about how ongoing road construction is making his commute to Gardenside a nightmare, Tony offers Joe some desk space at HomeSearch, since it's so close. But unless Joe's planning on formally transferring to HomeSearch, this arrangement would be illegal because it would impede Brett's ability to properly supervise Joe's activities.
