

Florida RV Park Complaint

On September 30, 2015, a complaint was filed with the U.S. Department of Justice alleging that Carl Bruckler, the manager of Southwind Village RV Park, discriminated against African Americans.

The Complaint

The complaint originated with the U.S. Department of Justice as part of its Fair Housing Testing Program. This program sends designates to pose as potential renters or buyers to test whether fair housing practices are being followed correctly.

The fair housing testers, who were African-American individuals, attempted to rent recreational vehicle lots from Southwind Village. Mr. Bruckler told the potential renters that there was a waiting list or that there were no lots available (neither of which was true), and discouraged the potential renters from further inquiries with Southwind Village.
