

Transfer of Title by Descent in Michigan

At-a-Glance

The typical order of descent in Michigan follows the laws of intestate succession:

- ✓ If there is a surviving spouse, the spouse will receive everything.
 - ✓ If there is no surviving spouse, the children inherit everything equally.
 - ✓ If there are no surviving descendants, the parents of the decedent will receive everything.
 - ✓ If there are no surviving parents of the decedent, the decedent's siblings will receive the estate.
- x If no heirs of the decedent exist, the property will revert to the state by the power of escheat.
